Do you avoid walking under ladders? Do black cats make you (36) ? Some people care very superstitious. They carry a lucky charm such as a rabbit's foot everywhere they go. Why is a rabbit lucky ?
 - Because it's born with its eyes open, of course!

Where do superstitions come from? Long ago, people didn't have the scientific knowledge we do today. To reduce their fear about (37) events, people came up with rituals. They passed their beliefs down from generation to generation. Some superstitions are timeless. Floors in buildings still go from the 12th to the 14th floor, even though nobody can agree why the number 13 is unlucky.

Superstitious people think they can turn bad luck (38) They "knock on wood" to avoid jinxing themselves. For example, if you say "I've never broken a limb" you should immediately search for a table to knock on to avoid a reversal of luck. You may break your leg tomorrow if you don't.

Many superstitions are related to money. For example, if you give money away on Mondays, you'll give money away all week long. If you leave your purse on the floor, you'll go broke. Gamblers are notoriously superstitious. If you're in a casino, never get up to use the washroom. Your lucky streak will go down the toilet.

Superstitions (39) from culture to culture. A superstitious African mother won't cut her baby's hair before her child's first birthday! In Mexico, a bride must not wear pearls on her wedding day. Pearls symbolize tears and an unhappy marriage.

Are you superstitious? How would you (40) if someone opened an umbrella in your living room?

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions

While you may not think it at first, there are numerous cultural differences between the US and the UK that you will likely encounter.

In general, Americans are much more open than Britons. Friends and even acquaintances discuss personal thoughts and opinions that might seem private in the UK. Do not feel embarrassed if an American asks you a seemingly private question. He or she is most likely sincerely curious about your thoughts and feelings and is assuming you would like to share them.

You may learn more about your American friends than you wanted to know, or you may hear more childhood stories than you care to listen to. Americans will be interested in your experiences and background as well since your upbringing may differ greatly from theirs. In addition to more frequent discussion about their personal lives, there is often a greater display of photographs, and posters in dorm rooms or office spaces.

The sense of humour differs from one side of the Atlantic to the other. Americans tend to be less dry or sarcastic. Some Americans may feel offended if they do not understand your humour, but after a brief explanation they will be laughing along with you.

Americans tend to believe that individuals control their circumstances by how much they work. This work ethic is reflected in American attitudes towards academics. Don't be surprised if you meet students who spend a vast majority of their free time studying in the library.

Americans also tend to care much more for punctuality than their UK counterparts. Everything from classes to a lunch date is expected to start right on time. Along with punctuality, most Americans move at a faster pace than that in the UK. For example, dinners at a restaurant, even a sit-down restaurant, can be finished in under a half-hour. Additionally, you will not have to ask for the bill. It will be brought to you as soon as it is clear to your waiter or waitress that you are finished ordering more items.

- A. they would like to ask private questions about others

- B. they would like to show you their photographs, and posters
- C. they would like to know about a different upbringing than theirs
- D. they would like to talk more about their personal lives than anything else

48. The American attitudes toward work or study are that

- A. they spend their free time studying anywhere
- B. individuals should control their behaviours and free time
- C. they move at a faster pace than in the UK
- D. they attach more importance to the load of work

49. All of the following about Americans are right EXCEPT _____.

- A. most Americans walk faster than those in the UK
- B. they tend to be more punctual than Britons
- C. their sense of humour is different than that of Britons
- D. they'll be laughing with you if they understand your humour

50. When you come to a restaurant in America, _____.
